

A SHORT BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Polly Thanailaki holds a Ph. D. in modern history from Democritus University of Thrace, Greece, and was a visiting-scholar at Harvard University, USA. She is the author of many books in modern history. Her recent work is entitled Gender Inequalities in Rural European Communities During 19th and Early 20th Century: A Historical Perspective (Springer 2018). She has also published a significant number of papers in peer-reviewed international journals and collective books. She has also presented numerous papers in international conferences. Her field of research is based on modern history where she mainly focuses on female education and culture, as well as on gender equality in an international perspective.